

Sex Pistols? 'They're a waste of money'

SCORE of students left the concert given by the controversial punk rock group the Sex Pistols in disgust halfway through the show at Leeds Polytechnic last night.

One said: "They are rubbish. It is the worst group I have ever heard. They did not shock me. Their music was just so bad."

Politics student Bob Sinclair, 21, said: "The question is not why am I leaving; but why did I ever come in the first place?"

Other disgruntled students said they had wasted their money going to see the foul-mouthed band.

The organisers claimed the show was a sell-out.

Later, the deputy president of Leeds Polytechnic Students' Union, Mr. Ian Coxon, 24, said: "I don't know if the Sex Pistols will play here again. It depends on demand."

The group might play again at the Polytechnic later this week, he said, but eight other concerts organised for the group have been cancelled.
