

Is that really Joe Strummer? Has Paul Simonon really joined Hill Street Blues? And do we really have a rare photo of Mr John Lydon smiling? But why the costumes, why the smiles, why the general air of post punk bonhomie? Well, you might be tempted to suggest that some of these people have been drinking, but the REAL reason for their unqualified peace of mind, is the fact that they all happen to be in the fab video of the new Big Audio Dynamite single 'Medicine Show'.

Yes sir, all is well in the ex-Clash camp again, with Mick Jones and the boys able to forget the past, trying not to mention the decidedly dodgy 'Cut The Crap'. And so, with Joe Strummer padded up like the Rod Steiger character in the great 'In The Heat Of The Night' flick and Paul S preparing to waste any stray rock critic, we leave this pleasant scene only pausing to ask — 'whatever happened to Slaughter And The Dogs'?

● "It's midnight, I'm wearing a spare tyre around my stomach, my last record was slaughtered and I'm standing next to this guy with a gun. Just where the hell are the Sandinistas when you need them?" Joe Strummer ponders his new career in videos.

● Aaah, those golden days when the whole world was going to quake at the sight of an English punk rock group. Nah, it never did happen did it... Still the Clash were at least the best dressed rock 'n' roll band in the world. Here Paul Simonon spots a pigeon.
